Rev Dr. Packard's Address at the Jubilee of the Episcopal Seminary Near Alexandria, Va.
[From the Richmond Dispatch.] After an appropriate introduction, Dr. Packard said:
When Dr. Keith and Dr. Wilmer met for the first time a class of young men in the lecture-room of St. Paul's, Alexandria, they by no means realized the significance of the work they had then begun. * * * * *

They could not, in their most sanguine expectations, have foreseen that at the close of its first half-century "this seminary" would have sent forth more than five hundred and fifty Alumni; that its graduates would be found in nearly every diocese of the United States; * that ten bishops of our Church would have received their theological education here; and that more than thirty missionaries, in faith in a living Savior, would have gone from this place to bear the name of Christ among the heathen.

The duty has been assigned me of giving a historical sketch of the foundation and upbuilding of this seminary. Let us first inquire what was the design of the founders of this seminary in establishing it, and in what spirit did it originate.
[Dr. P. then gave an account of the designs and purposes of the founders of the Seminary.] Let us now glance at the historical fact connected with its origin. We cannot say of it that, like Jonah's gourd, it came up in a night.
It was several years before its idea took a definite form. * * * * * Our Diocese deserves the credit of being the first in this country to take steps to provide for the education of its candidates for orders. Two years before the General Theological Seminary was established, in 1815, Dr. Augustine Smith, the president of William and Mary college, proposed to the Convention of this Diocese that a fund should be raised for the support of a theological professorship in that college, where there was already a valuable library, formed by Drs. Blair and Bray. The Rev. Dr. Wilmer reported a resolution "That the Bishop and standing committee be authorized to adopt measures for the promotion of an object of so great magnitude, and which may, under the blessing of God, be productive of the most beneficial consequences." Such was the germ out of which grew this seminary.

Notwithstanding this resolution, nothing was done till the Convention of 1821. In 1821 the Committee on the State of the Church in Virginia recommended to the Convention the establishment of a theological school in Williamsburg. In 1822 Dr. Wilmer reports that $10,- 000 had been raised. A similar effort at the same time to establish a seminary in Maryland had failed through the opposition made to it by Bishop Hemp and others. The want of success in Williamsburg, where Dr. Keith had but one theological student in two years, and the failure of the effort in Maryland, led to the removal of the school to Alexandria to meet the wishes of the Maryland brethren.

In 1824 the Rev. William Meade, whose name now appears always on the Journal in connection with the seminary, submitted the following report from the Board of Trustees: [Doctor Packard then quotes at length the report, for the purpose, as he says, of showing how prophetic were his (Bishop Meade's) views on the seminary, and above all, to show in what spirit the seminary originated. The Rev. Doctor also proceeded to speak in glowing and touching terms of the deceased professors of the seminary, their devotion, and labor of love, their humility, their oneness of aim and effort for the glory of God. He then mentioned the present professors, date of appointments, their several departments, &c.]

The founder and benefactors of the seminary deserve a notice here.
Over the grave of Bishop Meade, in the Hollywood Cemetery, is the inscription, "The Founder of the Theological Seminary of Virginia," and were no monument erected to his memory this seminary will be a monument more lasting than marble. Siquis monumentum, circumspecte.

To this seminary the heart, the cares, the thoughts of Bishop Meade were given. He watched over it with a father's care—yes, with a mother's tenderness. * * * * * For many years Bishop Meade gave instruction to the senior class in pastoral theology. Bishop Moore felt a warm interest in the seminary, and was always present at its annual examinations.

I wish I could give to you my own impression of the worth and services of Rev. Edward McDure, D. D., and others who assisted in the organization of this seminary and in the management of its affairs.
[The Rev. Doctor then spoke of the benefactors of the seminary—those whose liberality built the present seminary buildings, and of others who have contributed to the material prosperity of the institution. The Rev. Doctor then spoke eloquently of the beautiful situation of the seminary, its lofty position, varied scenery of hill and vale and river, and then spoke eloquently of the harmony existing between this outward beauty and grandeur of nature and the sublime truths of the religion of Jesus, inculcated within the walls of the seminary and treasured in the hearts of students and professors.]

What now, let us inquire, have been the results of this seminary in the half century of its existence?
We point to its five hundred and seventy alumni. The oldest on the list of the alumni, —Rev. George H. Smith, is permitted to test with us to-day. Who are they, and where are they? Ten have been bishops—three of them foreign missionary bishops; thirty-two have been foreign missionaries, who learned here that the field was not the United States, but the world. Let me call the roll.

The Rev. Doctor then called by name the thirty-two missionaries.
One of these missionaries, Dr. Hill, of Athens, Georgia, for nearly forty years taught the things which concern the Lord Jesus on the very spot where Paul reasoned of the Most High God; of the resurrection of the body, and of the eternal day.

Another (Bishop Payne) has for thirty-three years borne the heat and burden of the day under the burning sun of Africa, and has been compelled to return to his native State in enabled health.

Some of them were only for a short time in the foreign field, and returned to this country because of failure of health. Some have fallen asleep like the soldier on the battle-field. In the little graveyard at Cape Palmas, near enough to the ocean to hear the ceaseless dash of its waves, five of the Alumni of this seminary—Midor, Holcomb, Messenger, Robert Smith, and Golden Hoffman—have accomplished their warfare, and rested from their labors.
The London Christian Observer has said:— "We do not commit ourselves to terms of excessive commendation in declaring our belief that the annals of missionary excellence do not furnish a brighter example than that of Golden Hoffman."

The mission of our Church in China has been and is now almost wholly supplied with missionaries from our seminary. Two of our present students are ready to go whenever the foreign committee are ready to send them.

The soil of China has become holy ground by holding in its embrace all that can die of Bone and Henry Parker, who, unlike the rich young man in the gospel sold all that he had at the command of Christ and followed Him and his treasure in heaven.
Cleveland Keith, the son of Dr. Keith, an earnest and single-hearted missionary, perished at sea on his way to this country. When the "Golden Gate" caught on fire he exhorted to the last his fellow-passengers, as one of them who survived informed us, to flee to that Savior who was near his servant in that awful hour.

Our Alumni are to be found in nearly every diocese and in every large city in our country; * * * * * and two in Dioceses among the Pooka Indians represent our seminary. They have generally been, as Dr. J. S. Stone has said, "warm-hearted, devoted parish clergy"; or to quote the testimony of the Princeton Review, "There is now in Virginia a body of clergy who, for diligence, piety, and repugnance to Ritualism, are unequalled among Episcopals."

But the ranks of our Alumni have been like those of a regiment gathered after standing all day under fire. As the day wears on the ranks grow thinner, and at the evening roll-call to familiar names there comes back no answer. Could we summon them from their graves to meet again with us to-day what a goodly company would they make. And how would they exhort us to finish our course with joy, and to say to us, it is not written. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever?"

Let this great era in our seminary life be not only an occasion for reviewing the past but a starting point for a new era of greater progress for the half century to come. We need our endowment to be greatly increased; it is very insufficient for our pressing necessities. It will no doubt surprise some here when they learn that the annual income from our vested funds is but $7,000.

I hope that some measures will be taken at this meeting and in this crisis of the seminary life looking towards a sufficient endowment.
We need a new chapel, a new library building.
We need constant improvements in our course of study.
Let us in conclusion, dear brethren, watch day and night over that holy fire kindled from heaven fifty years ago here, and which has burned so brightly, that it go not out on this altar of God.
